EDITOR'S DAY.

Every dog has his and this is ours.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 28.—Responding to the general invitation extended by President Bennett H. Young to the press of Kentucky, supplemented by a personal letter to visit the city as the guest of the Great Southern Exposition, we took the L. & N. Express at the solemn hour of 2:30 A. M. Wednesday and arriving here on time, have since been enjoying the fatted calf killed in honor of the Association. Of 80 odd passengers on our train more than 40, Conductor J. W. Brown told us, had Exposition tickets, a fact which shows that the exhibition is already attracting the wide-spread interest it so eminently deserves. Besides a display that challenges the admiration of every visitor, the management is constantly offering special attractions and this is called military week. Ten or a dozen crack companies are here and since Tuesday have been drilling and going through the motions of war for prizes aggregating $4,500, paid to the best drilled organizations. These drills are conducted on beautiful grounds surrounded by an amphitheatre capable of accommodating 15,000 people, and to-day it was crowded by people from several hundred miles around.

With its varied other features, the county exhibit at the exposition form one of the most interesting. Some counties have tried themselves in making theirs as complete and attractive as ever, while others have done but little. Lincoln is away behind and we were really mortified at the smallness of her exhibit, when we were so well aware that with a little enterprise on the part of her farmers and others she could excel even the best. Again we call their attention to the fact that we will receive anything of interest from them delivered and properly displayed without a cent's cost to them.

With due appreciation of our assistance in informing the people of the scope, beauty and attractiveness of its great undertaking, the Exposition management has been lavish with its hospitality. It not only procured from the railroad passes for its guests to come on, but the hotels and other public places, the street car lines and—(no not the bar-rooms; we don't often drink, either collectively or individually) have all been thrown open to us. And to-day at 1 o'clock a lunch, as it was called, but in reality a banquet, was spread for us at the Park Restaurant on the grounds, after a long and pleasant ride had been made by President Young on the part of the management and Col. E. Polk Johnson in behalf of the city press. These were responded to in his usual happy style by Col. Stoddard Johnston, our beloved president, and then the line of march to the onslaught.

As to the battle on the good things had raged sufficiently, toasts were suggested and responded to as follows:

The State of Kentucky—Response by C. T. Atkinson.

Headlines—Response by J. R. McCleary.

The German Press—Response by Henry S. Cobb.

The Blue-Grass Region—Response by John A. Bell.

The Ladies of Kentucky—Response by John G. Craddock.

The "Peanutty Deestrick"—Response by W. W. Grunle.

Eastern Kentucky and Its Future—Response by John T. Hazeltine.

The Editorial-Large—Response by A. T. Morey.

Southern Kentucky—Response by E. L. Starling.

The Cincinnati Exposition—Response by George M. Dittus.

Tribulations of an Interviewer—Response by Joseph Eakins.

The Press of Louisville—Response by Hawthorne Hill.

Judge W. M. Hiley was Toast Master.

All the toasts were happily responded to, though some were a trifle lengthy in expressing themselves.

The editors were then conducted thro' the large building to the grounds, where they witnessed the superior prize drills of the companies. At 8 o'clock the grandest pyrotechnic display ever seen in this country was to have been given, but a heavy rain began falling at 7:30 and it had to be postponed. It has been a delightful day to the boys and one they will not soon forget. A fuller account will be given in Tuesday's issue.

It is said that Blaine's suit against the Indianapolis Sentinel is not his first libel suit.

The Portland (Me.) editor who was sued for libel by Blaine in a heated campaign a few years ago, says that he was not invited to court. It cost him the price of the writ—no more. The suit was dismissed as soon as the election was over and the present suit will go the same way.

It costs $33,000 per year to pay U. S. Senators the mileage allowed by law and each Senator is allowed $125 per year for stationery and newspapers.

A REPUBLICAN paper, the Boston Herald, thus arranges its party for the treatment of thieves: "Among the things which the supporters of Gov. Cleveland wish to have changed for the better is the policy of the Administration toward the thieves and rascals in the public service. Plundering and cheating by the wholesale and retail have been going on for years in the various departments, as the disclosures and discoveries from time to time have partially revealed. But what guilty man has been punished? One rascal was selected for the whisky ring, but not a rascal has been jailed or a dollar recovered of all the Star-route gang and its stealings by the million. Hundreds of millions have melted away in the dissolving views of our navy, but nobody has been caught at the plundering which must be going on. A high defaulting official walks out of jail in the capital and keeps in communication with his friends, but the government does not find him. Petty peculations in the naval and army and postoffice supplies are scarcely a three days' wonder when discovered. The people want an Executive Department that will not be interested, for partisan reasons, in overlooking or 'hushing up' corruption and rascality in the public service, but will go vigorously to work to discover, prevent and punish them. And to secure this there must be a change in the political control of the government."

In the debate a few years ago in Congress, between Ben Butler and John Young Brown, of this State, the latter described him as well as language would do it. Butler had charged the South with wholesale murder and to this Brown took special exception and said: "Now, again, that accusation has come from one—I speak not of men, but of language, and within the rules of this House—that accusation against that people has come from one who is outwined in his own home from respectable society; whose name is synonymous with falsehood; who is the champion and has been upon all occasions, of fraud, who is the apostle of thieves, who is such a prodigy of vice and meanness that to describe him would sicken imagination and exhaust intellect. In Scotland years ago there was a man whose trade was murder, and he earned his livelihood by selling the bodies of his victims for gold. He linked his name with the crime, and to-day it is known throughout the world as 'Burling.' If I wished to describe all that was pusillanimous in war, inhuman in peace, forbidden in morals, and infamous in politics, I should call it Butlerism."

Charles A. Dana, the editor of the New York Sun, never had a drop of democratic blood in him, being an old and violent republican, and it is a notorious fact in New York city that he has offered himself for sale in every presidential race since that of 1858. He was treacherous to Tilden, to Hancock and is now even more meanly treacherous to Cleveland. Money secures his editorial space for any cause that is able to pay for the use of it. Ben Butler owns the Sun at present. Hence, Mr. Dana's political course is never a matter of concern to honest men in either party.—[Sunday Argus.]

"An Explanation" Explained.

To the Editor of the Interior Journal:—Your last issue contained an article in which it gave the club that went from Stanford to Williamsburg, under a bad name, stating that our club was a lot of pick-up characters. I am satisfied, if you bring the matter to a test, that the character of each member of the club would compare more than favorably with the supposed gentleman that wrote the uncalled-for article. He signed himself "A Lover of the Spot." We are satisfied that he did not make a correct statement there, for he should have signed himself "Heddam!" If the gentleman (s) will go with us to-day, his expenses will be paid, including free tickets into the ball grounds for both games. CALL OF THE "HEDDAM" FINE.

SWITZERLAND.

AS SEEN BY GEO. O. BARNES

"PRAISE THE LORD"

PREMIER JURY, on the Jura Canton, Vaud, Switzerland, July 12, 1884.

Leaving this morning subject, we came to the foot of the great mountain, far up whose dark, craggy side we were to have our dwelling place. Here "Jimmy" dismounted from his horse, so did we all from our ponies, at as frequent intervals as the steepness of the way required which was disagreeably often Jimmy's "poo-ree" no longer fully armed to execute the duties of a driver, he was obliged to be carried by the sharp slopes. The whip came promptly in to and the driver's voice. The road was first-class, reminding me all the way of the lovely turnpike between Lexington and Mayfield, but the grades were heavy, for the mountain was high and steep. We picked wild strawberries en route to beguile the way. They are plentiful and good little things, with the full strawberry flavor, not diminished by culture, as is too often the case in the mountains of the market. "Calchab" is not always an unmixed good, if Boston does think it everything. At last we were up and emerged on the mountain top, upon a plateau that looked like an exquisite park. It was only a cow pasture, but it was a picture of beauty, all the same. Clumps of gigantic firs and beeches, scattered most artistically over an expanse of greenest grass; vistas inviting to a stroll; lovely mountain ranges to right and left, across lovely valleys inviting to a climb with Alpine stock and steeple books; with above the very way of life—for that could not be a deeper blue, nor hear the eye of a richer blue—swayed through the air—size of deities.

Our house was that of a Monsieur Corvo, who owned a tract of land on this mountain, living in Lausanne and had only procured it in his leisure. It was situated at the summit. Everything was "calchab" here. It corresponds with nature in its West in genuine simplicity. Monsieur Corvo and his family occupy a modest but a hundred yards higher up, and a little further down the hillside. We are on the very crest. We had to divide forces there for lack of room. Monsieur Corvo owns both farm houses—only the one we are in, kept for his own exclusive occupancy, while the other is let to a farmer. It was most kind in him to give us a nice room, with clean, pleasant beds and every detail of bedroom comfort fully attended to. The chalet is quite modern and quite pretty; built of stone and rubble plastered; finished within in pine—floors, sides, ceilings and odoriferous throughout. I like the wholesome fragrance greatly. Some don't. But I was exactly satisfied.

Monsieur Corvo is a blind-speaker, stout gentleman, very short and thick, with gray moustache and red face, quite like what Mr. Dudley Hudson, of Boyce county, was at 60 years. His wife and two younger ladies make up the family; whether his daughters are guests, I did not find out. Just across the low stone fence, that quite runs around the large, park-like yard, the usual Swiss cow barn is built. Here, carefully tended by a corps of men and boys, over fifty cows are cared for; milked morning and evening; and twice a day the milk is turned into cheese. The barn is a great, square, one-story, stone structure. A description of one structure answers for all. Everything is carried on under one roof and there is under that roof the queerest mixture of filth and cleanliness, sweetness and nastiness that I ever saw. The great copper boiler, where the milk is heated, is a bright as coloring can make it; the wooden tubs and paddles innumerable, are scrupulously white and purely clean; the cheese-room is dainty and sweet-smelling. But the floor of the factory is a slop of filth, the cobble stones covered with the secretions of the stalls; the odor of 50 cows, tied up by the necks in two long rows from early morning until 6 o'clock P. M., when they are released to graze for the night, is overpowering. The clothes, hands, boots of the men are plastered. When they milk I suppose they do it with washed hands, for the milk is clean and sweet. Men do everything. The strainer is unique and simple. It is a bunch of fir branches thrust loosely into the open bottom of a funnel-shaped tin bucket, thro' which the milk is poured into the great copper cauldron, as fast as layers of milkers can draw it from the cows. The cheeses are about 21 feet in diameter and six inches thick; weight varying from 50 to 70 lbs. They find a market in France, almost exclusively. Delicious cheese it is, with a buttery smoothness, and good. Better than English or American, to my taste. The cows are all belted. Their various adornments of that character hang in two rows, as long as the ranks of the kine, on a rack in front of them. Very musical are these cow bells of Switzerland and we are always in a mood of them. During the day the music is kept up by the half-hundred "young things" that are "coming on" to replace the number of the cows in the milk. These are belled also and the flies we find that the music is kept up to "fatten" the price of the three-day day. We were specially delighted to hear these "Sax-hall ringers" from the moment we strayed Pre de Joux and we like the music better the more we have of it. The bells are not like ours. Some are shaped like a handleless dinner bell of an American boarding-house—the tones of which have so often touched a responsive chord in us all in a region near the heart yet not of it. Then there is a globe-shaped bell of almost perfect size, with a most resonant, mellow tone. Imagine 50 or 100 of these, going at once under the various stimulus of
